LEONORA BROWN.

Thrilling Adventure of a Minnesota Girl with Indians.

On the border of Green Lake, in Minnesoto, there lived a sturdy, white-haired frontiersman named Walter Brown. He was one of those adventurous spirits ever to be found in the van of advancing civilization,-always courting the free, wild air of the prairie, and rejoicing in the profound depths of uninhabited forests. ter, the third or fourth year of their resiwhom he called Leonora. She was a good girl, and the idol of her father. He most pains in teaching her the use of it. Shejwas brave, and steady of nerve, and morning, by a lucky shot through the eye into the brain, she killed a bear. When she came home with the news, her father could scarcely credit her. But, he danced about the house for joy, and, seizing the stordy little maid, he mounted her upon his shoulders and insisted upon carrying her all the way to the spot where the dead bruin lay

The old man had about determined to move no more, and had accordingly located and pre-empted several thousand acres of land about him; and, learning from Watson that he had money enough to do likewise, proposed that he should go down to se Paul and buy land the land around that he could "swing," the rest of their days. To this proposition the young man heartily assented, and, after returning from St. Paul, he and old Walter took the woods, felling trees for building purposes. It was agreed, at first, that they should build a new howed log-house for up a small single roomed cabin; and then, the wedding was to take place, and the two men were to resume their work.

While thus busily engaged, the Sioux war broke out. It was the habit of Leonora to take her ritle every morning and shoot prairie chickens for the table, while her lover and father were hard at work on the new house. Watson had brought ner, as a present from St. Paul, a light and handsome revolving rifle, of which she became so expert that she could shoot a duck or a prairie chicken on the wing, with almost absolute certainty. One morning as she was strolling around the lake, rifle in hand, she notized three cance loads of Indians paddling along the opposite side of the water, steadily and stealthily approaching the snot where her father and lover were at work. She did not immediately appreshend any tragedy, but, in some unaccounts able way, she felt impelled to remain and watch their motions. She therefore conscealed herself behind the top of a fallen tree, and observed their movements, which grew more and more suspicious. There were two Indians in each cance, and noiselessly forward until they were within a few feet of where the two unsuspecting men were chopping. Suddenly, with a yell which made the forest ring. and which echoed and re-echoed across the broad, still lake, they sprang upon their victims and bore them to the

of this yard climbed Leonora, and behind the big elm she concealed herself. A few minutes more proved she was right in her conjectures. The Indians after having tied stout raw-hide thongs around the feet of their prisoners, laid them down in the bottom of the canoes, and, taking their guns with them, strode gaily and laughingly along toward the house, without any attempt at conceal-

Leonora's heart grew ashard as a stone, and her nerves, which had fluttered a little before, now grew as firm as steel. She had put fresh water-proof caps upon each nipple of her rifle, and, resting the barrel upon a rail of the fence, she drew a sharp bead upon the foremost one; but, as her finger curved to press the trigger, she heard what actually seemed to be a oice whisper:

"Not yet, Nora." She paused, and then, as by inspiration flashed this thought into her mind: Through pleasant pastures 'tis fearlessly flying, Crushing the crops with a shower of stones; "Wait till they get nearer the house hen shoot the hindmost one first." She obeyed the impression, and let hem come on a few yards nearer. Sadlenly, the thought came again: "Now's your time!"

Clapping her face to the rifle breech, she trained the death-telling tube steadily upon the chest of the rearmost Indian, for an instant and fired. The bullet sped true to its mark, and the burly Indian merely threw up his arms and fell dead,—the rifle ball having gone directly through his heart A clap of thunder from a clear sky could not have so utterly astounded the remaining Indians. Wildly they looked in every direction, to see from whence came the fatal shot. In the next instant bang went Leonora's rifle again, and another of their number dropped dead.

DR. JOHN BULL - D ar Sir: Last February I was in Louisville purchasing drugs, and I got some of your Sarsaparilla and Centron Bitters.

My son-in-law, who was with me in the store, had been down with the rheamatism for same time, commenced on the bitters, and soon frund his general health impressed.

Dr. Gist, who has been in bad health, iried Dr. Gist, who has been in bad health, iried them, and he also improved.

Dr. Goffee, who has been in bad health for several years—aromage and Livin effected—he improved very much by the use of your bitters. It deed the Cedron Bitters has given you gree a popularity in this settlement. I think you could sell a great quantity of your medicin a this fall—especially of your Cedron Bitters and Sarsaparilla. Da. John Bull.—Dear Sir: I have recently given your "Worm Destroyer" several trials, and find it wonderfully efficacious. It has not falled in a single instance to have the wished for effect. I am doing a protty large country practice, and have daily use for some article of the kind. I am free to confess that I know of no remody recommended by the ablest authors that is so certain and speedy in its effects. On the contrary they are uncertain in the extreme. My object in writing you is to find out upon what terms I can get the medicine directly from you. If I can get it upon easy terms, I shall use a great deal of the I am aware that the use of such articles is contrary to the teachings and practice of a great majority of the REGULAR line of M.
